The BMW E30 is the second generation of BMW 3-Series, which was produced from 1982 to 1994 after replacing the E21 3-Series. The model range included coupé and convertible body styles, as well as being the first 3-Series to be produced in sedan and estate body styles. The 320i was fitted with a two-litre straight-six petrol engine mated to either a five-speed Getrag manual or four-speed automatic.

This 320i Convertible was supplied new on the 6th of April 1990 and is fitted with the four-speed automatic gearbox. Having covered 97,700 miles from new across only six total keepers, the BMW has been in current ownership since June 2015. Provided for sale with the original service book with a significant quantity of stamps almost all from BMW dealer or specialist, or Porsche specialist. Most recently serviced in September 2020, the 320i additionally received new brake discs and pads, a new battery and a fresh MOT which expires in August 2021. The E30 is furthermore offered with the original owner's handbook, torch, toolkit, and triangle, as well as a small quantity of past MOTs and invoices. Currently fitted with an aftermarket gear knob, an original specification BMW part is supplied with the 320i too.
