Following lengthy delays, the eagerly awaited Alfa Spider was launched at the 1966 Geneva Salon. It is said to have been the last project with which 'Pinin' Farina was personally associated and, just one year later, was immortalised by the Dustin Hoffman film 'The Graduate'. The Series 4 version was launched in 1990 and employed the same basic bodystyle, mechanicals and chassis of the original version, but with improved styling over the 1980s models; including colour coded bumpers and a more luxurious interior. The redesign and manufacture were entrusted to Pininfarina and, while all examples left the factory in LHD form, many (including this car) were imported to the UK and professionally converted to RHD.
