The Honda Motor Company was founded by Soichiro Honda in 1937, initially producing piston rings for Toyota. They made their first motorcycle in 1949 and within 10 years had become the biggest motorcycle manufacturer in the world, going on to make over 400 million two-wheelers as well as millions of other power products. The launch of the four cylinder CB750 in 1969 ushered in the 'Superbike' boom in the seventies and Hondas crowning glory of the era was the amazing six cylinder CBX1000, still one of the few 6 cylinder motorcycles ever produced.

This excellent original condition CBX is the later B version with 'Pro Link' monoshock rear suspension and improved braking system featuring double ventilated front disc. The bike came supplied with a full fairing to emphasise its sports/tourer credentials and this example is fitted with the optional Honda colour matched panniers. The vendor is only the second owner of the bike having purchased it from the first owner in 2009 and it comes together with its original owners book, a few old tax disc and MOTs, a Dyno print out and even its original bill of sale. Supplied with a current V5C and MOT'd until September 2022.
