Unveiled at the 2007 Geneva Salon, the Maserati GranTurismo set a new record for the automotive industry progressing from design to production in just nine months! Based on a modified version of the M139 platform that underpinned the Quattroporte V saloon, the newcomer was equipped with all-round independent, double-wishbone suspension and powered by a Ferrari-derived 4.2 litre V8 engine (399bhp/339lbft) allied to ZF six-speed automatic transmission. Conceived as more of a luxurious grand tourer than an out and out sports car, the Maserati was reputedly capable of 0-60mph in 5.2 seconds and 177mph. However, the GranTurismo's stand out feature was its stunning Pininfarina styling. The work of Jason Castriota, it remains one of the twenty-first century's most elegant GTs. A sales success for Maserati, the GranTurismo evolved through various guises with some 28,805 being produced in total.

Finished in the striking combination of Black with Red leather upholstery, this handsome Gran Turismo dates from 2007. Supplied new by Graypaul of Edinburgh, its 4.2 litre V8 engine is allied to six-speed ZF automatic transmission. Fitted with upgraded 20-inch Birdcage alloy wheels which have recently been refurbished and shod with new Pirelli P Zero tyres, 'SN57 FCG' has had just 2 former keepers and covered a mere 39,500 miles from new. Offered with bookpack, handbooks and service book and just subject to an oil and filter change, the vendor currently considers the engine, transmission, bodywork, paintwork and interior trim all to be in 'excellent' order. He also tells us that the 2+2-seater will possess a fresh MOT by the time of sale.
