Though of show quality finish, 'NOX 23F' has apparently never been restored and its service records apparently support the vendor's claim that it has only covered 43,500 miles from new. It is powered by its original 325bhp 6.4-litre V8 engine, which we are told 'runs perfectly'. This drives through the factory-fitted C6 automatic gearbox via the original 3.25:1 Positraction axle to factory specification GT wheels shod with Goodyear Eagle radial tyres. This rare S-Code GT was at some stage repainted in the correct shade of Candyapple Red teamed with a Red bucket-seat interior that features a centre console and folding rear seat. The vendor's view of this very nicely presented, high specification muscle car is that the bodywork, interior trim and engine are 'very good' and the paintwork and transmission are 'good'. This decidedly desirable-looking Mustang is taxed and MOT'd until the end of July next year.
